“

Like the phantom in the room, the invisible boy or perhaps, Casper the friendly ghost, that's truly one of the best ways to describe my life as a child and a man when it comes to the world of reading. Hiding the truth of my inability to read has made me feel this way for quite some time in my life.

.....
Through your support of Literacy Advance, Gerald now has the literacy skills to better his life. He conquered his fear of crowds, recited poetry he wrote for the first time and has served as a keynote speaker for Literacy Advance on more than one occasion.
